By KIRSTIE WILDE

ANNABELLE THE cow is on the lam. Her owner, 11-year-old Meagan Scholink, has looked high and low on all the streets and canyons near her home off Tierra Grande in Mid Valley since the heifer wandered off June 29. And because of a law-enforcement snafu, they spent 12 hours searching in the wrong direction, according to Meagan's dad, Larry Scholink.

"We called the SPCA, the sheriff and the CHP to report Annabelle missing on Sunday, but it wasn't until Monday that the CHP told us somebody had reported seeing our cow Saturday on Tierra Grande Drive, heading for Buckeye Canyon, to the east.

The Scholinks had spent 12 hours yelling "Annie!" all over the neighborhood to the west, searching September Ranch with the kind assistance of foreman Jim Peifer, and going door-to-door on Loma del Rey.

"It's a great way to meet the neighbors: asking, 'Have Carmel PD will be putting its best paw forward now that Dax, handled by Officer Larry Bagley, has joined the force. Cpl. Steve Rana (right), now a full-time traffic enforcement officer, will patrol the city's streets on a shiny, new BMW.

Patrolling on two wheels or four legs

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IN TOURISTY Carmel — where traffic often comes to a standstill on summer afternoons — one police officer will now have a distinct advantage over his car-bound counterparts when it comes to getting somewhere quickly.

And another will have four-legged assistance when he handles a crowd or pursues a bad guy.

As of July 1, Cpl. Steve Rana became CPD's full-time traffic officer — a job that came with a brand-new BMW motorcycle. Freed from the constraints of a traditional police car, Rana can now make a U-turn on the narrowest residential street, maneuver on a sidewalk, ride along a footpath or even patrol Mission Trail Park.

"If we have a medical emergency and there's gridlock, even a patrol car with its siren on can't get there," he said. "Whereas on the motorcycle I can weave through traffic, drive on areas not designated for cars and jump curbs if I have to. In that respect, it's a very good tool."

And this week, just hours after police officer Larry

Council supports vote on fate of water district

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council has joined Monterey's call to let the people decide if the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District should get the boot.

At its meeting this week, the council voted 4-0 — in councilwoman Barbara Livingston's absence — to support Monterey's proposal to put an advisory measure on the November 2002 ballot to abolish the water district.

Council members agreed that at the very least voters should be given the chance to weigh in on the water district's performance over the last two decades and say whether or not it's time for a fresh approach to water.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, while supportive of the idea of a referendum, was leery about publicly endorsing a ballot measure that hasn't been written yet.

"We don't know if the ballot language will be pro or con, whether it would be about restructuring or completely abolishing the district," Hazdovac said. "In my view the district needs to remain, but the water board needs to be restructured."

However, the council decided to support the idea of a water district referendum while keeping a close watch on exactly how the measure is written.

Councilman Dick Ely, who served as a director on the water board for four years, said there is a lot of misinforma-

Naked porta-potties irk coastal commission

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CITY of Carmel got a slap on the wrist from California Coastal Commission staffer Mike Watson last week. The porta-potties — installed at Scenic and Santa Lucia June 13 just after the commission granted a permit waiver for the project — remain unscreened and therefore are a blight on the area's scenic beauty.

"One of the bases for granting a Coastal Development Permit waiver was that there would not be any coastal resource impacts, including view impacts, associated with the temporary structures," he wrote in an e-mail to city staffers. "The temporary restrooms have been in place for approximately two weeks now, and as such, the city must act to place screening around those structures immediately."

Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen said a red-wood shelter is already in the works and that he planned to notify Watson of that fact this week.

City forester Mike Branson arranged a $3,800 contract with KNA Construction to build the wood shelter, which will be identical to the one burned down by vandals last November, according to Guillen.

The contractor ordered the materials this week, expects them to arrive by July 8 and should begin construction two days later, the city administrator said. He anticipates the project will take three or four days to complete.

ARTISTS GATHER FOR 65TH BACH FEST

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

NEW VENUES. Parking woes. Not enough housing for musicians.

It hasn't been easy getting everything ready for this year's Carmel Bach Festival, which opens July 13 and runs through Aug. 4.

With Sunset Center in its second year of renovation, and security concerns locking the fest out of last year's main concert hall at the Naval Postgraduate School, a multitude of new venues had to be prepared — not only for some of the traditional offerings but for a whole new series of concerts, "Guests of the Fest," featuring visiting musicians.

All those new musicians have to be housed and fed. Rehearsal space has been at a premium. A temporary operations center and ticket office had to be arranged. Parking problems have arisen. And all this in the first year on the job for the festival's new executive director, Willem Wijnbergen.

But he's done a splendid job, according to the Bach festival's artistic director, Nana Faridany. "He's slain more dragons than St. George."

Wijnbergen had been on board just a few weeks when terrorist attacks on New York and Washington put all U.S. military bases off-limits to visitors, including the NPS, which the Bach Fest used for its main concerts last year.

"Willem has a very charming way of approaching people," Faridany said, "and that has opened doors for the festival."

The Carmel Mission Basilica will continue to be used for some of this year's concerts, but many of the festival's main events will be held in Monterey at Santa Catalina School's Sister Carlotta Performing Arts Center.

And for the first time, Merrill Hall at Asilomar Conference Center in Pacific

Grove will be used for special events. The hall, designed by Hearst Castle architect Julia Morgan, will be ideal, according to Wijnbergen, for performances by world-renowned artists like Yugoslav pianist Aleksandar Sedar, the Combattimento Ensemble from Amsterdam, and I Palpiti Orchestra — fea-

Carmel area sewer fees up sharply

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SEWER CHARGES went up again this week for residential customers of the Carmel Area Wastewater District. The annual charge — paid by everybody except those with septic tanks — is now $256, an increase of more than 60 percent in the last four years. Businesses also got hit with steep increases July 1.

Some ratepayers have decried the changes, especially compared to the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency's residential rate of $111.60, which has remained unchanged for the last 11 years.

Carmel resident Carolina Bayne was very upset about the steep rise in fees and wondered if the CAWD board is overpaying itself. She said board members get $100 per meeting (double what WRWPCA board members are paid) and have given themselves perks like dental coverage.

Von Dohren acknowledged board members have a dental plan but said their per-meeting pay is half of the state-allowed maximum and hasn't gone up in years. The board might actually soon consider giving itself a raise, he said.

As to rates, von Dohren said comparison with the economics of a big district like MRWPCA is not fair. For example, he said the Monterey district is not responsible for maintaining the sewer lines that deliver effluent to its Marina treatment plant.

"Over there, individual cities take care of their own collection systems," he said. "We take care of all collections" in the Carmel district. CAWD also has 75 miles of sewer lines and a better treatment facility, according to von Dohren.

Size also matters, he said. "Monterey Regional is much bigger and that's the hardest thing for people to understand.

They should compare CAWD [which serves 7,000 customers in its district and another 5,000 in Pebble Beach] with similar-sized districts and economics."

MRWPCA serves 65,000 customers.

The residential increase of 6.1 percent is minuscule compared to what commercial users are now paying. Bills for animal hospitals and boarding facilities increased almost 75 percent — to $1,070 a year — while supermarkets had a 60 percent increase to $6,060 a year.

The huge increases stem from a study that showed businesses were not paying their share, von Dohren said. Rates are being ramped up in a five-year plan.

The share businesses pay is based on state water board estimates because Cal-Am won't release customers' water use records, according to von Dohren. If a business can prove the estimates of its water use — and therefore the sewage it generates — are out of whack, the district will lower the business's rate and refund the amount overpaid.

CAWD's board of directors unanimously approved the rate increases June 20. Von Dohren said the additional money will keep CAWD running and help repair the infrastructure.

The cost of insurance — medical, property liability and workers compensation — are up by 48 percent to 85 percent this year, and von Dohren expects his electric bills to increase as well.

"We've cut our usage in half in the last five years and our costs have gone up, and this year we expect them to go up another 49 percent."

And with mammoth surcharges imposed by the Public Utilities Commission, CAWD rates may well head upward again.

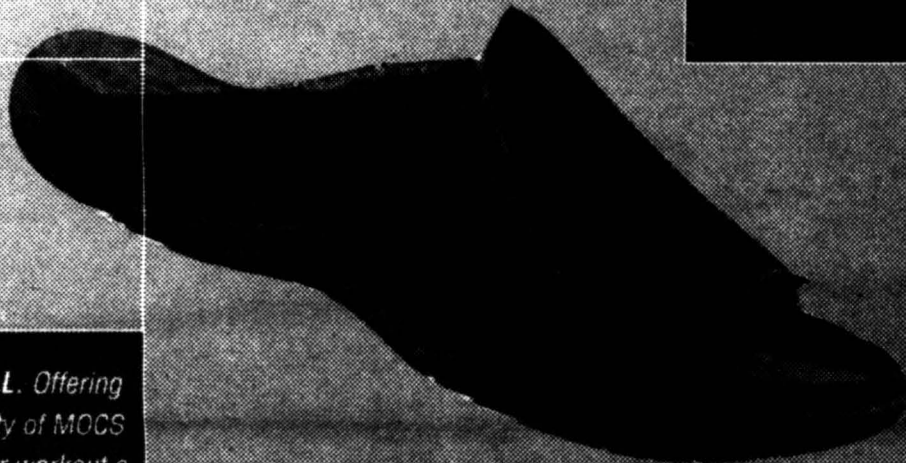

Also, the contractor who turns CAWD's sludge into compost has announced a fee hike of 60 percent more than the $50,000 CAWD paid last year. Von Dohren is searching for cheaper ways to dispose of biosolids, but does not want to resort to dumping them in a landfill.

Hiking rates will not only help cover the bigger bills, but finally bring the district into the black, he said.

"This year we'll break even for the first time since I got here seven years ago," he said. "This district had raised fees once in 17 years and, when I got here, was spending a million dollars a year more than it was bringing in. The board under-

Why did I get a Vitascan™? I had two reasons...

My dad and his father. Both died suddenly of heart attacks in their early 50s.

Vitascan's™
EBT Mobile Center

Final Week
at The Crossroads
Ends July 12th

With that kind of family medical history, I've made a significant effort to exercise regularly, eat healthy and take good care of myself. When my doctor recommended a Vitascan™ EBT screening to determine if I had any signs of coronary artery disease I scheduled an appointment almost immediately.

In just 20 minutes, the Vitascan™ EBT screening revealed plaque in one of my coronary arteries. In fact, later tests revealed a heart abnormality and I scheduled a triple bypass within the week. Two months later I went skiing with my family.

There's no doubt in my mind that Vitascan™ saved my life. And the ability to get an "inside look" at my heart has given me tremendous peace of mind.

Keeley named Sacramento's best

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

ASSEMBLYMAN FRED Keeley, who will be forced out of office by term limits at the end of the year, has been named "Legislator of the Year" by a Sacramento political magazine with a reputation for non-partisan, in-depth reporting.

Keeley, a Democrat, has been "at the center of virtually every important issue facing the legislature," the California Journal said in its July issue. "He knows how to play the inside game, not in an insidious way but to provide real leadership. Everybody respects him."

The magazine gives its award — dubbed "The Minnie" — every year to the legislator it thinks has been the most effective at the state capitol.

Senator Bruce McPherson, a Republican, agreed Keeley has been an exceptional leader in the assembly during a time when California has been hit with an electricity shortage and several bitter scandals.

"Fred's been in the starting lineup and probably batting cleanup in a lot of these critical issues facing the state," he said. "And I've worked with him on some important legislation, especially for our district."

Keeley played a leading role in getting the Highway 1 climbing lane built. And he has tried, so far without success, to come up with a new water supply for the Monterey Peninsula.

The magazine's award is ironic for Keeley, whose political future is in doubt. If McPherson is elected Lieutenant Governor in the fall, Keeley could run in a special election next spring for the local Senate seat. Or he could wait until 2004 and run in a new district that encompasses Monterey Bay.

Either way, he leaves the assembly, "having set an extraordinary standard for future legislators," the California Journal said.

AT&T Broadband

Dedicated to bringing you the most advanced cable technology, AT&T is upgrading our cable system in your neighborhood. The upgraded system will provide our customers with a wider variety of services, an expanded channel line-up, improved reception, and increased signal reliability. The enhanced system will offer advanced cable services such as Digital Cable TV and high-speed cable Internet access.

In the next few weeks, AT&T Broadband will be integrating fiber optic cables into the system and, in some cases, replacing or upgrading the coaxial cables in your area. AT&T Broadband has worked closely with the City of Carmel Public Works and Planning Departments during our pre-construction preparation. As part of our upgrade process, construction crew will need to place ground mounted enclosures housing essential cable equipment in key locations throughout the City. AT&T Broadband, working in concert with the City of Carmel is pleased to announce that the number of required ground mounted enclosures has been reduced 50 percent to a total of seven sites. Our aerial crews will also be placing fiber and coaxial cable throughout the city. To minimize any inconvenience, we will attempt to work in one area at a time. Also, please be assured that construction crews will be removing any existing overhead cable lines and pole mounted facilities that will no longer be required at the completion of our project.

At AT&T Broadband we want to keep our valued customers and neighbors informed about improvements in our service. For day-to-day reports on construction activity in your area, please call the AT&T Advanced Network Construction Information Hotline at 1-800-945-2288. ## Carmel Red Cross volunteers far flung

THIRTY-ONE Carmel Red Cross Chapter volunteers worked a combined 126 weeks during the last year helping people all over the country cope with disasters, chapter executive director Lynette Balesteri announced at the annual meeting June 26. But some of those dedicated workers couldn't make the party at Holman Ranch last week — they were still out in the field.

Pebble Beach resident Denise Gillam — whose many three-week stints last year included aiding flood victims in West Virginia and arriving in New York two days after 9/11 — had just returned from a Northern California wildfire when she was sent to Colorado June 12.

She and Carmelite Georgia Hyndman have been working in Denver to acquire and distribute donated goods and services to victims of the Colorado fires, which as of July 2 had consumed 260,382 acres and were still burning.

Last week the Red Cross disaster relief headquarters there took delivery of 11 semi-trucks full of "mitigation kits" donated by Home Depot. Each kit, built by Home Depot employees, included a five-gallon bucket, a shovel, a rake, a hose, gloves, safety goggles, dust masks, flashlights, batteries, water and cleaning supplies, according to Gillam.

"They are working with the Red Cross and local fire departments to provide valuable emergency services to people impacted by the worst wildfires in Colorado history," Gillam said. The kits amounted to a $200,000 donation and victims throughout the state received them last weekend and this week.

Hyndman, who worked at the Grand Junction fire before heading to Denver a week later to assist Gillam, said the division received donations of everything from drinking water and food to medical supplies and teddy bears.

Even the office space that has been used by more than 200 volunteers — a previously unoccupied office building in a Denver industrial park — was donated, as well as the chairs, desks and a copier, according to Hyndman.

"We get just about anything required for the job," she said, though the Red Cross brings its own computers, phone lines and other equipment to each disaster site.

People are so generous, in fact, that part of Gillam and Hyndman's job is turning donations away.

"That's one of the problems: Companies offer things we can't use, like dated products," she said. "We have to watch very carefully that we get what we can use because we don't have any warehouse space." The group also doesn't accept personal items like clothing, she added.

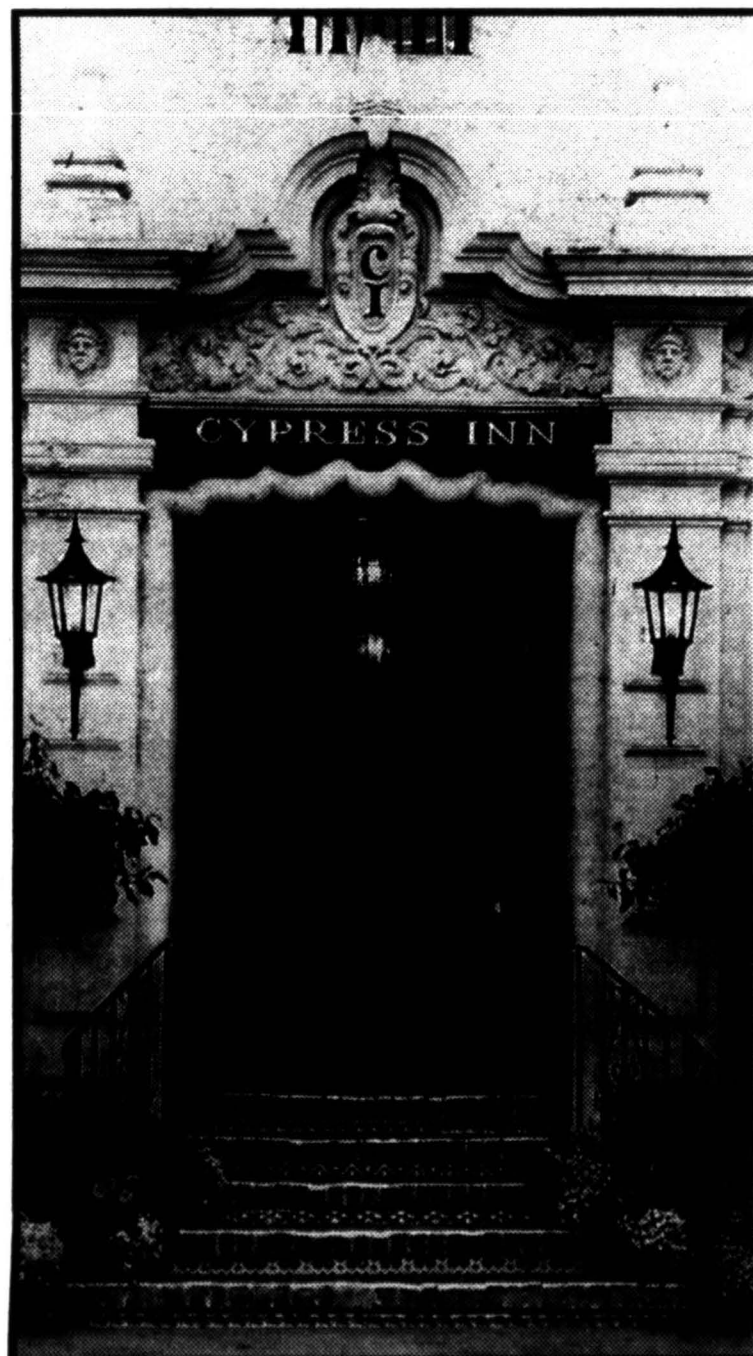

Gillam said the Denver headquarters serves all the fires in the state, including Glenwood Springs, Canon City, Denver and Durango.

And now that some of the flames are out and things are under better control, Gillam said she just learned this week that she will soon be setting up disaster relief services for flood victims near San Antonio, Texas.

"There a lot of other disasters in the country that need volunteers, she said. "That's the way it works."

Aquarium hopes flower hat jellies reproduce for first time in captivity

By TAMARA GRIPPI

MONTEREY BAY Aquarium's newest guest — the brilliantly colored "flower hat" jelly — will soon be part of a groundbreaking research project to induce the rare, native Japanese creature to reproduce in captivity.

The Aquamarine Fukushima aquarium in Japan, a sister institute to the Monterey Bay Aquarium, collected the unusual jellies from the south coast of Japan and delivered them by plane to Monterey last week.

The flower hat jellies, scientifically identified as Olindias formosa, differ from most other jellies in that their vivid chartreuse and magenta tentacles originate at the top of the translucent, pinstriped bell. Other tentacles trailing under its bell can quickly coil and uncoil.

"They're really spectacular," said Bruce Upton, aquarist with the Monterey Bay Aquarium. "Their colors look like something from the Grateful Dead."

Visitors to the aquarium will be able to see the unique creatures as part of the aquarium's "Jellies: Living Art" exhibit. But researchers at the aquarium are even more excited by the prospect of witnessing the flower hat jellies complete their entire reproductive life cycle.

"This is the first time they've ever been displayed in the U.S.," said Upton. "No one in the world has cultured the animals to this point."

Upton explained that the aquarium received a group of 15 flower hat jellies last summer, which spawned and made it to the "polyp" stage of reproduction — when the larvae grow to resemble tiny anemones — but unfortunately didn't finish the last stage of the cycle when the tiny organisms clone themselves by elongating into segments which then break free and swim away.

By March, the original group of flower hat jellies had died. Upton said the aquarium isn't sure exactly why the unusual jellies didn't last longer. Perhaps the environmental conditions weren't quite right or maybe the flower hats have a short life span.

The researchers will be looking very closely at the newly arrived flower hat jellies to see if there is an environmental "cue" — including a change in temperature — that spurs the immature jellyfish to their final metamorphic stage.

"We're kind of shooting in the dark trying to figure out the needs of these kinds of jellies," said Upton.

The flower hat jellies — which can grow to be six inches in diameter — tend to live near the bottom of the ocean and feed almost entirely on small fish such as anchovies, which they can grab with their tentacles.

The jellies are found in waters off southern Japan, Brazil and Argentina and become visible in May and June when the water current changes temperature from cold to warm. Then the jellies come up on the current and appear, Upton said.

The colorful creatures were safely carried in water filled plastic bags in Styrofoam boxes during their plane trip from Japan to California.

The flower hat jellies differ from most other jellies in that their brilliantly colored tentacles attach to the top of their bells.

Agencies love lagoon barrier, but is it too ugly?

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A NEW plan to sink a corrugated metal barrier along part of the Carmel River Lagoon to keep nearby homes from flooding is enjoying enthusiastic support from government agencies.

But some area homeowners concerned about views and environmental impacts think the metal fence is not the answer.

"Our feeling is it would create more problems than it would solve with regard to flooding," said Carmelo Street resident Connie Stroud. She also said the ground is too soft to support the corrugated steel, and she questioned how runoff from her neighborhood's streets would make its way through the barrier.

"We have major water coming down the street from all angles," she said.

But State Fish and Game biologist Kevan Urquhart said the barrier, which will include gates and pumps to handle water building up on its landward side, "will solve most if not all of the lagoon issues."

He touted the success of a similar project to the north, where residents of Pelican Point at the mouth of the Pajaro River erected barriers in sand dunes to protect their homes from flooding without damaging the surrounding habitat.

"All in all, we don't see any downside to it," National Marine Fisheries Service fishery management specialist Patrick Rutten agreed. "It has the potential to finally address most of the lower flood issues in that estuary."

Every summer, a sandbar builds up across the mouth of the Carmel River. When winter rains arrive and the river rises, county workers have usually opened the river mouth with a bulldozer — an action which now requires permits from numerous state and federal agencies because it can harm native steelhead trout, a threatened species.

But the metal barrier would allow the river to rise and break through the sandbar on its own, Urquhart said. "And the county won't have anything to do with it, so all the environmental issues go away and the homeowners are protected."

Lynn Rhodes, California State Parks superintendent for the Monterey district, agreed the plan has merit but said many questions remain.

"It may very well be viable and could solve a lot of problems," she said, adding that all the agencies need to discuss the plan in greater detail to ensure it meets everyone's needs. State parks is in the midst of a comprehensive habitat restoration project at the south end of the lagoon in the old Odello fields.

While it may prove better for the fish, Stroud said the barrier could hurt other lagoon wildlife instead.

"What about the little animals?" she asked. "They'll be trapped and they'll drown in the middle of the lagoon."

Urquhart responded that draining all the water from the lagoon in just a few hours, which is what occurs when county workers bulldoze the sandbar, is far worse.

"Most of the invertebrates are washed away" and the birds have a feeding frenzy" on all sorts of creatures that are stranded, he said. "The evacuation of the lagoon severely depresses the food chain and the whole ecosystem out there."

Several residents have also complained the barrier will ruin their views of the scenic lagoon.

"It's the ugliest thing you've ever seen in your life," Stroud said of the metal barrier.

"That's not a non-issue," Urquhart admitted. "But in order to maintain their view without this wall, they are asking us to continue to allow the county to endanger the environment."

He said he believes the barrier will be unobtrusive anyway, since most people will look right over it from their decks and windows.

Many details have yet to be ironed out, including how much the barrier will cost, who will foot the bill, on whose property it will stand and how it will mesh with lagoon restoration efforts.

County, state and federal officials have said the barrier will be installed on state parks property — Carmel River Beach is a state beach — but Rhodes said nothing is set in stone.

"We really want to work with everyone to try to take advantage of these kinds of opportunities that could solve a longstanding problem and be helpful to the environment," she said. "This proposal as presented would allow the lagoon to breach naturally. Everybody seems to agree that would be a good thing."

Man sues driver who hit him on CV road

By MARY BROWNFIELD

COLIN FLETCHER — the octogenarian Carmel Valley resident hit by a car driven by a 61-year-old woman near All Saints Day school last August — filed a personal injury lawsuit against driver Marie Treacy in Monterey County Superior Court June 19, even though the California Highway Patrol concluded the accident wasn't Treacy's fault.

Fletcher, a writer, is suing for lost wages and earning capacity, loss of use of property, hospital and medical expenses, general and property damages, and future medical expenses and lost wages.

He was struck while crossing the street after leaving a Carmel Valley town hall meeting around 8:30 p.m. Aug. 13, 2001, sustaining head injuries and multiple extremity fractures, CHP Officer Richard Richards said.

According to the CHP report, the vehicle was moving about 40 mph westbound on Carmel Valley Road as Fletcher was crossing. He was not in a marked crosswalk.

Treacy told police she saw someone run in front of her car, and that she braked but couldn't avoid him. The road was dark and there were no other vehicles in the area.

Based on statements given at the scene, damage to the vehicle and Fletcher's injuries, the CHP concluded Fletcher caused the collision by failing to yield to cross traffic, a California Vehicle Code violation.

Fletcher was taken to CHOMP and remained there several weeks. While he was hospitalized, he said he was unable to recall the details of the collision.

Local UN group clears Bosnian village of land mines

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IT'S NOT often a nonprofit group can sponsor a project that saves lives, creates jobs, houses the homeless and feeds hungry people. By raising money to clear land mines from a small farming community in northwestern Bosnia, the Monterey Bay Chapter of the United Nations Association accomplished all of those things.

Three years after the local UN Association chapter launched a fundraising effort to clear deadly explosives out of Dropci, Bosnia, the group has the satisfaction of knowing 14 land mines have been removed from the tiny farming village and nine homes are once again safe for families to return.

"The people hadn't been able to live there or farm their land since the early 1990s," said Larry Levine, president of the local UN chapter. "Now people can return to their homes and be productive again."

The group raised $35,000, which was matched by the International Trust Fund for De-mining and Mine Victims Assistance, and paid for more than 40,000 square yards of land to be cleared of the dangerous land mines, which are left over from Bosnia's brutal three-year civil war, which ended in 1995.

Last summer, 15 workers and six mine-detection dog teams completed the dangerous de-mining work in Dropci. And the local UN Association now has in hand a copy of the certificate declaring the village free of explosives.

Levine said sponsoring the de-mining project was a deeply satisfying project for members of the local UN chapter.

"Land mines are horrible problems all over the world," he said. "This is something concrete we could do to benefit people. It's not theoretical or philosophical, but has an impact."

Making Dropci safe should also help improve the economy in northwestern Bosnia because the town serves as a central market for local farmers.

And the area also contained an important power line that had been out of commission for years, depriving the surrounding villages of electricity.

Another benefit of the Adopt a Minefield program — coordinated by the UN Association of the USA — is that it provides work for people in areas where unemployment is crippling.

"After wars cease, the economy is often destroyed," Levine said. "An awful lot of people, including former soldiers, are unemployed."

The actual work of clearing out minefields is as dangerous as it is tedious. Working on their hands and knees, and at great personal risk, de-miners inch along the ground using metal detectors and long probes to search for mines.

The Monterey Bay Chapter of the UN Association was the first group in the United States to complete its fundraising for the minefield project, raising $35,000 in less than four months.

With 500 individual donors and 25 community groups or businesses, the fundraising effort was a grassroots success.

While the local group is proud to be able to make a difference for Dropci, Levine explained that little more than a dent has been made in the problem worldwide. The group is thinking about adopting another village.

"There are still many tens of millions of mines that are still killing and maiming people," Levine said. "And the most vulnerable are the young children, because they are most likely to stray."

The Adopt a Minefield campaign is active in Bosnia, Croatia, Mozambique, Cambodia, Vietnam and Afghanistan.

For more information about the Adopt a Minefield program or other programs sponsored by the Monterey Bay United Nations Association chapter, contact Levine at 625-9414 or by electronic mail: farflung@redshift.com.

you seen my cow?" said Scholink. "But it's harder to explain how you could misplace a 1,000-pound animal."

On Tuesday, the Scholinks followed the CHP lead and headed to the top of Buckeye Canyon, where Dale Schleis, the foreman of Saddle Rock Ranch, searched for Annabelle, to no avail.

Annabelle in happier times.

"There's plenty of food out there, but very little water," Scholink said. "The folks who reported seeing Annabelle had a pool in the yard. I hope she got a drink before she left."

Her roommate, the steer named Beef Jerky, misses Annabelle, too. She's described as "big and black" with no brand. And "If you offer her some grub, she'll lick you," according to Scholink.

tion about the district and whether it has achieved what it was supposed to achieve.

Ely said the water district has done "an extraordinary job" in the areas of water quality, conservation and protection of habitat along the Carmel River. "Have they solved our water supply problem? Absolutely not," said Ely.

Hazdovac said she disagreed that enough has been done by the water district. Because of our perennial water shortage, the community is still being forced to conserve "at a ridiculous rate," she said.

Councilman Gerard Rose said that while over the years there have been many able members of the water board, including Ely, and some things have been accomplished, overall, the board has been a failure since it was created in 1978.

"At some point, residents are owed the opportunity to say, 'Folks, enough is enough,'" Rose said. "Without taking a position on whether or not the district should be replaced, amended or something else, it's clear we should give residents a chance to say they want something else."

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud called the council's attention to the large amount of public money spent by the district since it was set up by a vote of the people after a severe drought in the mid-1970s.

"The City of Monterey asked the water management district how much money it has spent over the last 24 years and the district simply sent them stacks of its financial papers," McCloud said. They dug through the papers and discovered that the district has taken in $90 million and spent $70 million — without enhancing the community's water supply.

In fact, in the mid-1970s, the Monterey Peninsula had a legal water supply of more than 20,000 acre-feet a year. Now, less than half that much is legally available. In most communities, a permit moratorium has been in effect for several years, and there's no end in sight. The result has been a near halt to new residential construction, except by tearing down old homes. Remodels and business expansions are also severely limited.

The mayor added that since water has become such an important issue — especially when it comes to building affordable housing — it may be time "to take stock of where we're going."

"The alternative is to maintain the status quo," Ely said. "I don't think anybody is happy with that."

Carmel's Betsy Ross pieces together American flag

By TAMARA GRIPPI

NINETY-YEAR-old Evelyn Sharp, long-time Carmelite and jigsaw puzzle wizard, put together a 1,500-piece American flag for the city's first annual Fourth of July celebration.

Sharp spent two hours each day for two months assembling the red, white and blue masterpiece, which she presented to the American Legion Post 512 during the patriotic ceremony. She still has good eyesight, Sharp said, and she didn't have any help handling the tiny pieces.

"She's quite a lady," said Michael Bloom of the American Legion, adding that the jigsaw flag puzzle would be displayed prominently at the Carmel post.

Sharp, who has lived in Carmel for 50 years, said her father instilled patriotism in her as a young girl growing up in the historic Bradford Mansion in San Rafael.

"Every morning he would raise the American flag and in the evening he would order my three sisters and me to stand at salute and he would bring the flag down and we would fold it very carefully and bring it in the house."

Sharp has impressive roots in American history, predating the Revolutionary War. Her ninth great-grandfather, William Bradford was the first elected governor of the Plymouth colonies.

"He was the man who started Thanksgiving," Sharp said.

Sharp, a Mills College graduate with a masters degree from UC Berkeley, taught biology — "and just about everything under the sun" — in local schools. She retired from Carmel High in 1971.

A friend and former student gave her the American Flag puzzle soon after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

While the puzzle — with the words of the Declaration of Independence written across its banner — was a challenge, Sharp has mastered even more difficult puzzles over the years, including a 1,500-piece Tower of Babel.

Her family never has to worry about what kind of gift to give Sharp. This past Christmas she received nine jigsaw puzzles.

"I have a certain amount of patience, which makes it very easy to do," Sharp said. "I love it and get a good feeling when I find the piece I'm looking for."

Cartoonist Eldon Dedini, whose cartoons have appeared innumerable times in The New Yorker and Playboy magazines, will present a free slide lecture at 7 p.m., Thursday, July 11 at the Carmel Art Association, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Dedini and his artist wife Virginia Conroy live in Carmel and both are members of the CAA. Dedini's talk was originally presented last fall for the Festival of Cartoon Art organized by the Ohio State University Cartoon Research Library. Reservations are not necessary for the lecture, and refreshments will be served. For information, call 624-6176, or visit the association web site at www.carmel-art.org.

CAA reception for July Showcase artists set for Saturday evening

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

THREE DIVERSE artists will be featured in the July Gallery Showcase at the Carmel Art Association beginning July 5 and running through Aug. 7. Edward Norton Ward's recent watercolors inspired by his travels to the Southwest, Oregon and Northern California will be shown. Pam Carroll's hyper-realistic still life paintings in oil, and Melissa Lofton's oil-landscapes will be featured.

An opening reception for the artists will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, July 6 at the gallery on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel-by-the-Sea. The event is open to all. For information, call 624-6176.

A LEGEND RETIRES

WHAT CREATES a legend? Talent, certainly. But even more, it's an attitude, a style, a unique way of getting across one's personal take on life. Diane Bower, who was Road shop.

My car trunk is bursting at the seams.

Week Two: The plan is to finally drop off the sharpener & stuff after an errand in Sand City.

Shoot! I'm halfway home when I remember the "plan."

Week Three: I swing by the YBR after work to drop off the clothes.

Shoot! I missed them; they're closed.

Week Four: I've got to remember to look up the YWCA address.

Shoot! Week's gone and I never got around to it.

Week Five: I'm up early — out the door by 9 a.m. (Yes, that's early for me.) I'll pop by the Cancer Society's Discovery Shop and drop off as much as I can.

Shoot! I get there. Lights are out. They're not open yet.

Week Six: Drop off everything at Goodwill? Nah . . . I'd still be stuck with the printer. The garbage can crosses my mind for a millisecond — just long enough to picture a landfill with my printer at the top of the heap, with my name emblazoned across it. Ugh!

Week Seven: That's it — I can't go on like this. I've got to empty my trunk — where will I put my sister's suitcases when I pick her up? I'll drop it all off at Last Chance on the way to SFO.

D-Day: Finally! A few more minutes and I'll be rid of it all.

@#%$! Was that the dump's exit I just drove by?

I have two choices: have a nervous breakdown, or make a U-turn.

I make a U-turn.

WHAT'S NEW with Meg

A rainbow of colors in a new yarn, "Manos del Uruguay" at MONARCH KNITTING & QUILTS - and you're going to love it! A stunning array of solids & variegates are hand-spun and hand-dyed by rural Uruguayan women. The soft wool is kettle-dyed over a wood fire, giving the colors a subtle variation in tone! Nothing quite like this yarn which comes in a huge variety of patterns! Also, two new silk yarns. One is top of the line cultivated silk in lustrous colors; the other, Turino, is a light, crisp, tweedy yarn at only $4.99 per ball! Joan has more of those popular, colorful magnifying glasses - only $9.95 each! 529 Central, PG. 647-9276

Prim & Proper

Good news from PRIM & PROPER! Dea says a whole lot of wonderful clothes are due in this month. A new fall group by David Brooks - black suede suits of pants, jackets and skirts; new shipment of Foxcroft wrinkle-free skirts; an attractive striped t-shirt to wear with them; Buffalo plaid jacket in wool poly; new shipment of Toby Weston handbags; great selection of jewelry sets by Katherine K; new Brighton belts and sunglasses. Suggest you hurry on over to PG, Lighthouse & Grand!!! 372-5563

Some words of praise for the tried and true shop called THE TOTAL DOG! About as far from a "chain" store as one can get, May Carpenter decided 25 years ago she wanted a shop that would be an outlet for her love of dogs, a shop that would be personal and thorough, that would have everything for the dog (except food), that would bring people together over a mutual love and concern. And as everyone knows, she has done just that! Been there lately? Across from the Barnyard, Carmel. 624-5553

Avalon Beads

Great news from AVALON BEADS! This shop of attractive jewelry is moving to the Del Monte Shopping area and will be there to greet you officially on Aug. 1st. However, you might check them out in their new location as early as mid-July. They'll be located between the Tuxedo Shop and the Wherehouse, facing the same parking lot that Starbucks faces. Pick up a coupon now at their shop on Alvarado St., Monterey, for use only at the Del Monte Shopping Center store, and look forward to as much as a 30% discount! The new shop is just lovely, convenient parking & oh, such beads! Call 624-4520 in the Barnyard for the new number.

Enjoy these shops & services. Summer is here!

Back August 2nd...

Meantime, mention "Meg" wherever you shop!

VITO'S IN PACIFIC GROVE: ITALIANO, SIMPATICO E DELIZIOSO

IT'S THE closest thing to North Beach we have on the Monterey Peninsula.

While we have a number of fine Italian restaurants here, several of them exceptional, few of them convey that friendly, relaxed family feeling that one finds, say, at The New Pisa on Green Street, or Capp's Corner on Powell in the City. But Vito's restaurant does, and Caruso's Corner on North Fremont, Monterey, comes close.

Located next to Trader Joe's in Pacific Grove in the well frequented but not overly attractive Forest Hill Shopping Center, Vito's draws a regular clientele who seem to know each other, or who feel free to talk to one another across an aisle. A waitperson pulls out a chair and sits with three women clients as she takes their order. The host (Vito) drops by later and joins them for a chat. I love this atmosphere. It's so Italian.

On Monday night, Coach John Madden was there with three pals, all enjoying the Italian cuisine which is billed as Sicilian and Northern style. They appeared to be regulars,

Vito Favolora, the owner, has been running his restaurant since 1986. His sister, Grace Favolora, is the chef. We were served by Gina Favolora, his cousin, who made us feel right at home, and answered all our questions with a smile: The Merlot was from

Santa Cruz, Chile ($6/glass); yes, they make their own cannoli ($4) that's filled with a very light ricotta; and sure, I could have my salad with the entrée if I liked.

Vito says they're best known for their lasagna and gnocchi, which they make from scratch. Actually, they make almost all their dishes from scratch.

The gnocchi looked enticing, and the fragrance that wafted over from a neighboring table as it was served had me making a mental note to order it next time I dine at Vito's. It is served in a blue cheese, basil sauce, or a fresh tomato sauce. The entrée portion is large ($13.25), so I might split an order with a dining companion, or order an appetizer plate of it for $8.50.

Our first course was fresh melon slices with prosciutto crudo di Parma ($6.95). Perfect! For our entrée, we enjoyed veal piccata ($17.95), a classic dish, served in a lemon caper sauce. It was prepared in the traditional manner: lightly floured tender veal escalope, sautéed and served by deglazing the pan with lemon juice, rather than wine.

The veal was accompanied by very fresh vegetables al dente. A small side plate of linguine with a ragu Bolognese was also served and was delicious — made even more so by a fresh grating of Parmesan cheese and black pepper. All entrées come with soup or salad and of course, the ubiquitous garlic bread. It's made by rubbing fresh garlic cloves over the bread, then buttering and warming it.

Several couples seated near us were indulging in a fresh fish and shell fish feast (entrées run from $15.95 to $18.95) and steamed clams ($9.95) and calamari cutlets ($7.25) are offered as appetizers. Vito says the fish is delivered daily.

Fresh pasta as a main course runs from $12.50 for penne alla Marinara, to $16.95 for linguine alla Livornese (clams, shrimp, mussels and squid in tomato or white wine sauce). And meat courses run from Brucioli alla Siciliana ($16.50) to filet mignon ($19.95).

The main dining room at Vito's seats 60, and there is a private room for 35. Whether dining alone or with a group, you will be treated like royalty.

nearly 30 years before retiring a few weeks ago, fits the bill. Countless Pebble Beach socialites, and other individuals with a thirst for more knowledge, more style, have been through her courses. They learned, they laughed and they soaked up her classic "Mrs. Bowerisms" — "It may not be something I would choose . . ." she'd say with her lady-like primness, when faced with undeniably bad taste. Students would come for one semester and stay for the whole program. Word that she was retiring brought on a frenzy of registration in her last year for the remaining slots in prized classes. Not surprisingly, her send-off was a double dose of emotional walks down memory lane.

First was a surprise luncheon at Stokes Adobe held by her students just days after finals. Katie Swanson, Brenda DiPietro, Silvia Von Buseck, Rosemary Heinz and Alison Macbeth got designer Janice Gistinelli to trick Diane into showing up. Janice and cohort Lynn Bohnen were her alumnae from 20 years ago. Mary Vantran made a cake in the shape of a white camel — a favorite of the guest of honor. With her husband of 39 years, Jim, looking on, Diane wondered out loud, "What am I going to do when I don't have all those people to control? Jim is getting very nervous!" But instead, he said, "I've been her student for 39 years — and she's the one who taught me how to enjoy life." Others there included alumnae Melodie Taggart and Brooke Doyle, and David Baker. The second party was held at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club Beach House, and it was packed with co-hosting family — son Andy & wife Sue, daughter Patrice & grandson Matthew, 8 — and her closest friends, including "The Broads," a group of ladies with whom she's traveled, played and shared. Almost all were here: hostess Ann Mahoney, Anne Washburn, Ginny McLain, Jane Lundy, Monterey Councilwoman Ruth Veeland, Madeline Van Zander, Barbara Sovereign, Marilyn McMasters, Lucy Campen, Nan Borreson and Emelia Franke. Ruth emphasized the positive role her friend had played over the years: "She opened doors for women — she's been a leader, a woman, a professional." Bunny Davis looked fabulous just back from Europe. Alumna Regina Falzone went on to the famed Parsons School in N.Y. "I was so disappointed — they didn't care for the students the way she did," she recalled . . . Colleague Mary Nelson affirmed, "She's a class act; she picked the same year Yves St. Laurent did to retire!" Cartoonist Meg Biddle was a baby ("Baby Meg") when she first met Diane, who was hired by Meg's father, the U.S. ambassador to Spain, to live in Madrid in 1961 and tutor his kids. "I was her first student, and I'm still alive!" Meg jokingly announced to everyone . . . Son Andy Bower said growing up with her wasn't that hard: "She's almost impossible to shock!" Muriel Wegner dismissed the idea that Diane was really retiring. "Before long, she'll be in a dozen things!" she stated. (Diane is an accomplished artist and an expert in textiles.) Jim Bower's already thrilled at his wife being home. "She's already removed the mildew and re-caulked the bath; I'm looking forward to her retirement tremendously!" he quipped . . . Others there included: Verna O'Connell, Lorraine Kendall, Lee von Hasseln, Ann Whitworth, James & Theresa Poole. So what's really next for Diane Bower? Let's just use another Mrs. Bowerism and say, as heard countless times at the end of her class, "To be continued . . ."

Annual bash for Red Cross

cue held on a gorgeous evening at Holman Ranch. Exec director Lynette Balesteri introduced the "new kid on the block," Dean Andersen, head of Emergency Services . . . Clarice Pruitt, a former board member whose late husband Jim worked with Comstock and later built the Red Cross office in Carmel, chatted with friends Margaret Ruth and Boots Rice. Boots said she can't recall how she ever got that first name. "But my grandkids love it!" Carroll Fergusson laughed up a storm with Hildegard Mitchell who worked as a disaster relief worker in New York over Christmas, an unforgettable experience. "We stayed at the Marriott in Brooklyn and they were incredibly nice to all of us," she recalled. "And we all learned how to ride the subway!" . . . Jean Snow, who spent many years as manager of the chapter, caught up with friends Sharee Fauskee, Phyllis Crockett and Anna Azzopardi . . . Micky & Gregg McKee have been very busy with the Oriental Arts Society, which Gregg founded a while back . . . So has Dorothy McEwen with her work with the Carmel Valley Seniors Program, which organizes monthly luncheons that include a speaker and a bingo game . . . Canadian Christine Monteith recently moved here by way of the Silicon Valley bust. She had a top PR job at ABC-TV in New York when she was recruited by a dotcom. When that didn't last very long, she decided to stay in California and move down here. Real estate is her thing, now . . . Pat Clark had grandchild Taylor Stillwell, 9, and daughter Chris Stillwell, visiting from up north . . . Others there: Helga Greaver, Jill Lynch and Jean Lovell.

LEADERS PREDICT FUTURE OF BUSINESS IN WAKE OF 9/11

MARTHA FINNEY's title to her book, "In the Face of Uncertainty," is a brilliant choice. It not only summarizes the American business climate, but our own personal lives, as well, in these days since Sept. 11. Is there anyone whose interior emotional stabilizer hasn't been reset since that day of infamy?

The Salinas author is a veteran business journalist, management consultant and speaker, has been featured on CNN and National Public Radio, and her articles have appeared in major newspapers and magazines.

The subtitle to the book is "25 Top Leaders Speak Out on Challenge, Change and the Future of American Business."

Finney has interviewed a cross-section of American business leaders across the country, CEOs and presidents from a variety of product and service sector companies from the Northeast, Washington D.C. and the Southeast, the Midwest and the West Coast, garnering their views on how they plan to lead their companies into the future.

While each interview was unique with its own set of questions, Finney did ask three questions of each: "What are you certain of? What are you uncertain of? and What is the essential ingredient for resilience?"

She said "Their answers added different facets to the overall, global perspective on the story of American business at this point in time."

at this point in time."

A few key lessons that emerged were: Think globally, but act locally; Old fashioned principles of good business management still apply; Assume that what was true yesterday, probably isn't true today; and You can't escape the economic cycle.

The one key ingredient for success, Finney, believes, is hope. "Hope is the well from which business can draw creative, optimistic, effective response to anything that fate will throw at us," she suggests. And it is hope in our personal lives that always sees us through any dire situation. Things change.

Of the 25 leaders interviewed, two are local men: Michael P. C. Carns, General, retired, U.S. Air Force, who lives in Pebble Beach, and Chester D. Haskell, president of the Monterey Institute for International Studies.

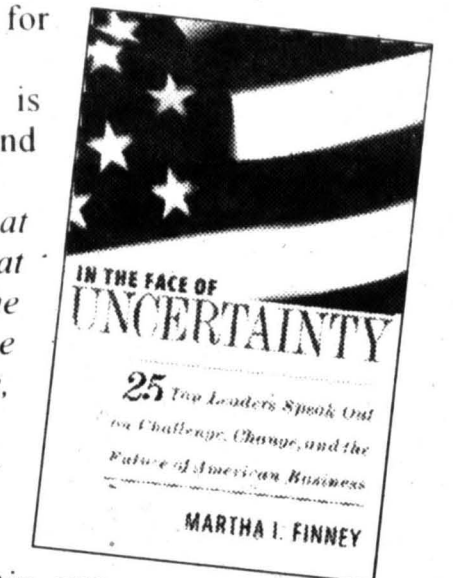

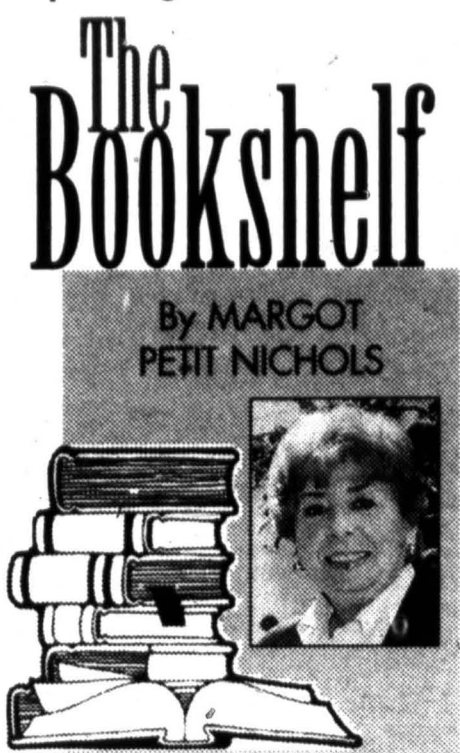

The 240-page hardcover is published by AMACOM and retails for $21.95.

Martha Finney will appear at a discussion and book signing at 7 p.m. on Saturday, July 6 at The Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel.

WE ALL live many lives* in one lifetime, some more dramatically than others. One of the latter is Dietrich A. His distinguished career gave him a ringside seat at the electronics and communications revolution of our time: He

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF PATRICIA ELLEN KING aka PAT E. KING

Case Number MP 16138
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of PATRICIA ELLEN KING aka PAT E. KING.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by MICHAEL A. ANTONCICH III in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that MICHAEL A. ANTONCICH III be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 26, 2002 at 10:30 a.m., Dept.: 16, in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Petitioner MICHAEL A. ANTONCICH III, 24683 Upper Trail, Carmel, CA 93923. (831) 620-1828. (s) MICHAEL A. ected the receiver and antenna development for the multi-function phased Array radars at White Sands and Kwajalein for the interception of missile-borne warheads, participated in live nuclear tests at the atomic energy test range in Nevada, and helped develop a commercial coast to coast navigational system. And finally, before retirement, Alsborg developed the design of a system that could interrogate and track a single central station every microwave relay installation in the country.

Alsborg was awarded 18 U.S. patents during his career. He was elected a Life Fellow of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, and served a five year term at the Electromagnetics Academy.

Alsborg's book, "A Witness to a Century," is a true memoir, embracing his early years in Germany under the Weimar Republic and the persecution of the Nazi period. Although raised Christian, because of his Jewish ancestry — as many were — he "became a pariah in the German society, and during Kristall Nacht of 1938, had to flee and go into hiding for three weeks before making a harrowing escape to the U.S." He met and married his wife Glenna LeBaron in Cleveland, Ohio.

His engineering career in the U.S. was interrupted by induction into the U.S. Army, and until the end of World War II he served with the U.S. 15th Army in France, Belgium and Germany.

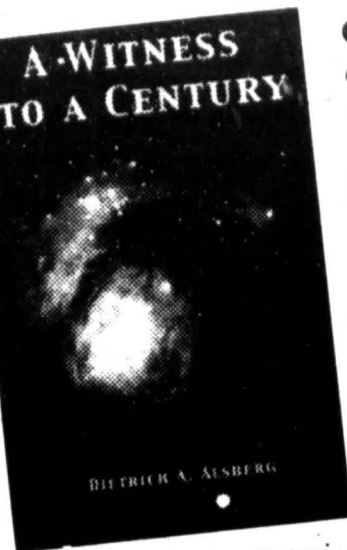

Alsborg's personal family and civic life are interwoven with his 36 year career at Bell Laboratories and his world travels. The death of David, the youngest of his four sons, an innocent bystander during a 1993 store holdup in New York, is recounted with touching simplicity. The Alsborgs moved from New Jersey to Carmel Valley Manor in 1994.

The 382-page trade paperback is available for $20.95 and is published by Authors Choice Press, San Jose, New York, Lincoln, Shanghai — an imprint of iUniverse, Inc. of Lincoln, Nebraska (www.iuniverse.com).

Although the book details many scientific and technical matters, it is a fascinating read, well written to hold the reader's attention throughout, and easily followed by those without a technical background. It is a remarkable story.

BACH

turing prize-winning young musicians — which will accompany Ida Händel, the "grand dame" of the violin, in a program of Bach, Mozart and Shostakovich.

"We're hoping our longtime audience members will find something exciting and new at this year's fest, and we're also hoping to attract a whole new generation of supporters," Wijnbergen said.

While Wijnbergen has been setting up new venues and arranging new concerts, Faridany has been in charge of finding accommodations for all those performers. Music director Bruno Weil flew in from Munich this week and concertmaster Elizabeth Wallfisch arrived from London. Festival chorale director Bruce Lamott is in town from nearby San Francisco, while 120 vocalists and musicians have arrived from various corners of the globe.

Faridany said she's rented "a lot of houses — but we'll have to have a combination of other houses and hotels for short periods of time for musicians who will appear in only a few concerts. The musicians will be coming and going throughout the festival," she said.

Other changes this year have to do with the festival headquarters. A small cottage in the courtyard at All Saints Church is the festival's central box office. The chorale and recital groups will also be rehearsed at the church, and a "café des artistes" will be ongoing for musicians, who can have lunch, pick up their mail and check rehearsal schedules there. "It will be a sort of Bach Festival Club," Faridany said. "All Saints Church has been a godsend for us."

The festival's traditional tower music will again be heard before main concerts at the Mission, played by a brass ensemble in the church tower. It will also be heard by concertgoers arriving at Santa Catalina, with musicians playing at a pavilion at Del Monte Golf Course which is contiguous with Santa Catalina.

Parking — limited at all the venues but especially at Santa Catalina — has been solved for the main concerts, which draw the biggest crowds, Wijnbergen said. Six shuttle buses have been arranged to leave the Monterey Peninsula College parking lot, running back and forth continually and dropping off concert-goers directly in front of the performing arts center at Santa Catalina. The buses will stop at the Del Monte Golf Course pavilion for those who want to hear the tower music around 6 p.m.

"There will also be parking at the Del Monte Golf Course," Wijnbergen said, "but only in pre-paid parking, which can be arranged when concert tickets are ordered."

For a complete Bach Festival schedule of events and performers, visit the website at www.bachfestival.org or call the festival box office at 624-2046 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Hours will be extended during the festival.

POLICE

Bagley introduced his enthusiastic partner, Dax the German shepherd, to the city council, the new K-9 cop was called out on his first assignment — to investigate a burglary just outside the city limits.

While it turned out the burglars had already fled the scene hours before, both Carmel Police and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department were grateful to have Dax on hand.

The four-legged investigator recently graduated near the top of his class at a state-certified police dog course in Santa Cruz and passed his background check — in which Carmel police interviewed his veterinarian and neighbors — with flying colors.

Making it official

Rana took delivery of the motorcycle from BMW of Santa Cruz in May. On July 1 it became an official part of the force — the same day he switched to full-time traffic duty. The

POTTIES

Meanwhile, the lawsuit filed against the city by Fort Worth businessman Geoffrey Raynor questioning the legality of the plastic toilets has been scheduled for an Aug. 8 hearing before Monterey County Superior Court Judge Robert O'Farrell, according to Raynor's attorney, John Bridges.

The porta-potties may remain on the Scenic Road bluff while the matter is decided, according to an order signed by Judge O'Farrell June 27.

Raynor's suit alleges the city bypassed the public hearing process and broke city and state laws when it installed the porta-potties June 13 to replace those destroyed by fire last November. The city responded that it obeyed all the rules in obtaining the coastal commission's waiver for the temporary toilets and that their installation violates no city or state laws.

BMW and Rana's salary are covered by the city's $100,000 COPS (Citizens Option for Public Safety) grant of federal and state tax dollars.

"The bike's not costing the city a dime," he said.

It's comfortable, too. The $21,000 motorcycle matches California Highway Patrol specifications, including radio equipment movable windscreen, adjustable seat, heated hand grips and other amenities. It also has built-in front and rear radar detectors so speeders can be nabbed coming or going.

While the motorcycle is new, Rana's not new to motorcycles. He joined CPD in 1986 and became a certified motorcycle cop in 1987 after taking a two-week course in San Diego that emphasized tricky maneuvers requiring riders to battle the forces of gravity that pull on an 800-pound bike.

"The majority of the training is moving at very slow speeds and being able to stay on two wheels," he said.

He rode the department's first motorcycle, a Kawasaki, for two years before crashing while chasing a suspect down Carmel Valley Road in 1989.

"I only got bumps and bruises, but the bike was totaled," he said.

A Harley-Davidson replaced it, and Rana rode that until the motorcycle cop position was eliminated in 1993 budget cuts.

Rana kept his skills intact by riding the Harley on occasion — a practice that is now serving him well as CPD's only traffic officer. The beat keeps Rana busy. His job includes catching speeders and other errant drivers, surveying streets, responding to complaints, setting up the radar screen that tells drivers how fast they're going, investigating accidents and handling abandoned vehicles.

"It's definitely a full-time job," he said.

Now that Rana and the BMW are official, he intends to embark on new efforts to get drivers to be mindful of the rules.

"We're going to stress education prior to enforcement," he said. He will use the news media and face-to-face contact to warn the public about things like speeding, running stop signs and double parking.

And Dax — whose "salary" also comes out of the COPS grant — will help with CPD PR as well. When he's not sniffing out the bad guys, that is.

Whining about modern medicine

SOON AFTER Bill Clinton became President, he declared that a health care crisis existed in the United States — a crisis so severe that it warranted nationalizing the entire health care industry.

While most Americans have their complaints about the cost or availability of medical care, Clinton wasn't able to sell the "crisis" or its "solution" to the nation. When they thought about it, Americans realized that most of their grievances about their health care system derived from its successes, not its failures.

In the early 1900s, for example, millions of Americans lost their lives every year to simple bacterial infections. Polio, smallpox, tuberculosis, diphtheria and malaria killed millions more — yes, even in the United States. Simple asthma was commonly a fatal disease. The average life expectancy in the U.S. was less than 50 years. Still, nobody claimed that a health care crisis existed.

By mid-century, thanks to the work of legions of dedicated scientists, many infectious diseases had been conquered. The average American born in 1950 could expect to live a whopping 68 years! Nevertheless, hundreds of thousands of Americans died every year from untreated high blood pressure. Victims of routine heart attacks were usually hospitalized, monitored and prayed over — until they died. Most cancers were certain death sentences. But a national health care crisis remained undeclared.

By Clinton's first year in office, life expectancy was up to 75 years and today it is even higher. Diseases that struck fear in our grandmothers' hearts have been forgotten. Millions of Americans live for decades with conditions that would have quickly killed them had they been born in an earlier generation. Medical care is costly, bureaucratic and frustrating. But it works.

It has worked so well, in fact, that many people believe that being healthy has become a God-given right. It isn't, of course. Sickness and death are as much a part of nature as the birds and the bees. Mankind has conquered a whole host of horrible illnesses through diligence, hard work and ingenuity. The promise of a long, healthy life has become a benefit available to most Americans, not a right to be demanded or taken for granted.

Here in Monterey County, we are blessed with several top-notch hospitals and hundreds of highly qualified doctors. CHOMP is undergoing an ambitious expansion that will double its size. We have first-rate cancer treatment and cardiac care right here at home — and not far away, in the San Francisco area, specialists in every field of medicine are available.

Not every disease, obviously, has been eliminated. Everyone will die sooner or later. The most up-to-date medicines cost plenty. But while we are healthy, and perhaps even more so when we are sick, we should be grateful for the doctors and scientists who have helped make our lives enjoyable and long-lasting.

Letters to the Editor

Let them use Mutt Mitts?

Dear Editor:

Having four young children, I am certain that the reestablishment of toilet facilities at the south end of Carmel Beach is worthy of an emergency exemption from any regulations impeding such restoration. For, what can be more of an emergency than an "emergency"?

However, recognizing the emotional anguish that the Texas-based individual (does the smell really reach that far?) must be under such as to cause him to bring a lawsuit to effect the restrooms' removal, I offer two "out-of-the-box" solutions:

1) Since the individual's Scenic Road vacation home is apparently within 100 feet of the porta-potties, he might demonstrate some of that legendary "Southern Hospitality" (from which we Carmelites could certainly learn a thing or two) by offering to leave the back door of his home unlocked so that we beachgoers might use his facilities. In turn, we will promise to wipe the sand off our feet before entering.

2 The Mutt Mitts® ("pooper-scooper" gloves designed for clean-up after canines) which are currently provided at the top of each stairwell leading down to the beach could be put to use for humans as well. However, this solution would likely require an Environmental Impact Report as well as countless Coastal Commission hearings.

Erik Davidson, Carmel

Problems with lagoon solution

Dear Editor:

As a homeowner on Carmelo Street on the Bird Sanctuary I would like to emphatically vote NO on the proposed plan submitted by Alan Williams on June 20 regarding the Carmel River lagoon.

There are many, many issues which have not been properly addressed (mammals, native plants, birds, flooding from adjacent run-off areas, etc.).

The wind whistling through rusted corrugated sheet metal — is not Robinson Jeffers' vision of the wetlands, nor ours.

Connie Stroud

'Environmental fanaticism'

Dear Editor:

Supervisor Dave Potter chaired the meeting this week on the Carmel River lagoon and the discussion was amicably conducted. Clint Eastwood's representative, Alan Williams, displayed a sample of a steel wall 5 feet 6 inches in height to be placed in the reeds around the lagoon. This would allow the opening of the sand bar to be postponed until the water in the lagoon rose to the top of the wall. It was proposed that where the wall would be placed by the homes on the shore of the lagoon white stakes the same height as the wall would be placed, to demonstrate to what degree it would intrude on the view. The project was favorably received. A question was raised as to how rainwater coming down the hill would drain out to the lagoon and a provision has been made for outward drainage by valves at the bottom of the wall.

There was one very disquieting item at this meeting and that was the facile concession of the interpretation of the Endangered Species Act that immature fish must not be washed out by opening the sand bar, even if it means flooding the homes in this neighborhood. Laws are made to be intelligibly interpreted and this is not intelligible and certainly not responsible. There is an obvious element of environmental fanaticism in the claim. It should be challenged by our public representatives local, state, and federal, and if necessary, in court. If the law is not capable of intelligent interpretation it should be changed.

One question to be raised is the definition of an endangered species. One lady at the meeting aptly informed us that this endangered species (steelhead), has been for sale at the local Safeway. We have lived here for 19 years, our neighbor across the street for 23 years and our neighbor down the street for 40 years. We have seen the sand bar opened every year by the rangers at Point Lobos and in recent years by the county. It is now a disgrace that these elderly people are given such worry and anxiety by the threat of having their homes flooded. This is an unnecessary crisis which should never have occurred.

Opposition not welcome?

Dear Editor:

Having read Mary Brownfield's recent article about the Carmel Valley Forum, it's interesting to note that four of the six people named to the forum were active members of the Carmel Valley Incorporation Steering Committee. The full list of 25 names would be enlightening, particularly since they don't have "... entrenched opinions." So far I am opposed to incorporation because the Initial Feasibility Study appeared under-budgeted and understaffed, and I am not unhappy with county governance. How many others of the 25 have been historically involved in the C.V. incorporation movement or have expressed such support? Don't count on this group to welcome any opposition or criticism to the "facts" they will present.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will conduct a public hearing to consider Planning Commission and staff policy-level recommendations and public testimony on the Draft Update of the Monterey County General Plan, and to provide direction to staff in the preparation of the final General Plan. The public hearing will be conducted according to the following schedule:

Date	Time	Hearing Topics
July 15, 2002	7:00 p.m.	Public Testimony on Housing and all other General Plan Topics
July 16, 2002	10:00 a.m.	Staff presentation on Planning Commission Recommendations and Policy Options
July 16, 2002	1:40 p.m.	Public Testimony on Policy-Level Recommendations on Draft General Plan
July 17, 2002	9:30 a.m.	Board Work Session (Closed) to consider the Planning Commission and Staff Recommendations and Public Testimony and to give direction to Staff

All meetings described above will be conducted in the Chambers of the Board of Supervisors, 2nd Floor, East Wing, Room 225, Monterey County Courthouse, 240 Church Street, Salinas, California. The public is invited to testify on the Draft General Plan in accordance with the schedule above.

The Draft Update of the Monterey County General Plan is a 20-year program that directs actions and funding priorities and defines long-term goals and policies for development on properties within the County. The Draft Plan represents both the Local Coastal Program Land Use Plan for unincorporated Coastal Zone areas and the General Plan for all unincorporated lands in the County. The Draft General Plan builds on the foundation established by the 1982 General Plan and successive area plans and local coastal plans, which were written to assure protection of our natural and economic resources. In addition, the Draft General Plan proposes solutions for the impacts of past growth and public service deficiencies, as well as strategies for managing new development in a manner that will enhance the quality of life for all who live in and enjoy Monterey County. The Draft General Plan is the result of public input received at more than 200 public meetings held around the County over the past two years.

The Draft General Plan proposes to change the land use designations, density or intensity of uses for some unincorporated areas and proposes to change various policies that may affect development of property. These proposed changes may or may not affect your property. The public is encouraged to review the Draft General Plan policies and maps prior to the Board of Supervisors public hearing. Large-scale maps showing the proposed minimum parcel size requirements for future land divisions in rural areas and maximum residential densities for future development in urban areas are available for public inspection at the Monterey County General Plan Update office, at 150 Cayuga Street, Suite 9, Salinas, California.

The Monterey County Planning Commission held a series of public hearings on the Draft General Plan in the spring of 2002. In response to the public testimony received, the Planning Commission has forwarded a number of policy-level recommendations on the Draft Plan for the Board of Supervisors' consideration.

For more information, please call Ann Anderson, Monterey County General Plan Update Team, at (831) 755-5353.

Sandy Claws

JAK McKENNA, about 5, used to live in Watsonville under his alias, James. Mom Ann and Dad Tom happened upon him at the local SPCA several years ago while looking for a golden retriever to fill the empty nest at home. One look at Jak, and the position was filled.

Jak is part Border collie, part long-haired dachshund and part something else, probably, and his curly tri-color coat is entrancingly apricot, cream and brown. He is enthusiastic about friendships — as he is about everything else — and looks for pals Hugo Gambill and Bruce McCloud on his thrice-weekly forays to Carmel Beach.

A lover of routine, Jak plans out his days and evenings, looking forward to various playtimes, sleep-in-the-garden-in-the-sun times, and romp-on-the-beach times. Each evening after dinner, when Mom and Dad are relaxing in the living room, Jak brings them each a toy from his toy basket, which they obligingly throw a few times. Then he brings them each another toy, and so on, until his toy basket is empty. After more throw-and-fetch, he returns all the toys to the basket, ready for tomorrow evening's session — a feat unheard of in the annals of Sandy Clawism.

At the end of the day, he jumps up on Mom and Dad's bed for a loving "good-night," then trots off to the den where he sleeps the night away in his bed on Dad's chair. If only Jak had read Browning, he could sum up his days with, "God's in His heaven, all's right with the world."

Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

One of Carmel's most respected historiennes, Marjory Lloyd, has taken issue with our story of the great Fraser Feud of 1906-14. "FRASER WAY," she says, "was not named after either Hector of Wilbur Fraser, but after A.P. Fraser, the first mayor of Carmel. He had originally named this short lane 14th Avenue. But when the developers of the Mission Tract laid out their subdivision south of Santa Lucia some time later, they designated their first cross street 14th Avenue." This caused nothing but confusion, and it was Mrs. Fraser* who resolved it by suggesting, "Why don't we call it FRASER WAY?" We have pursued our studies of the Fraser brothers and can now report that Wilbur gave up his dream of establishing a public inn and became the rector of a small Episcopal parish in the Portola Valley. Hector made a series of unfortunate investments and died almost penniless in 1947 in Jamestown, California. He was then the proprietor of a small pub, called Fraser's Folly. What a curious switch of ambitions.

*The fact is, says Marjory, that Mrs. Fraser had passed away by this time. So her suggestions came via divine revelation.

Homeowners grateful for breathing room on projects

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council offered a life raft — in the form of permit extensions for homes that have been approved but not built — to a group of homeowners floundering between Carmel's changing rules and the California Coastal Commission.

The extension — approved by the council 4-0 at its July 2 meeting — allows property owners who received the city's OK for their new homes before Carmel's design rules changed to keep those approvals active for a year after the city's Local Coastal Plan is certified. (Councilmember Barbara Livingston was on vacation and didn't vote on the permit extensions.)

Those homeowners' plans might no longer be permissible under the city's new design traditions overhaul adopted a year ago. While most of those Carmel property owners would like to go ahead and build their new houses as soon as possible, they are afraid to go before the California Coastal Commission for final approval.

"It's very clear from the comments of the coastal staff that they consider people in our position a political tool — I believe hammer is the word," said Jerry Baker, who said he and his wife spent over two years to obtain approval for their new house.

Now Baker and others who are in the same situation will be able to wait until the city's LCP is certified. Then they can get their final approval from the city, not the coastal commission.

In the last couple years, the California Coastal Commission has been loath to approve any projects which commission members believe could change Carmel's ambience.

In February, the coastal commission voted unanimously to allow a 79-year-old Lincoln Street cottage to be torn down. However, one month later, while arguing it needed to "hold the line" on Carmel demolitions, the commission denied one request and encouraged another applicant to withdraw his application until after the LCP had been approved.

At the city council's meeting this week, senior planner Chip Rerig told the council that four projects have already exceeded their time limit and by the end of this year, time will run out for a total of 10 projects.

"This is designed so that [property owners] won't have to go back and start from scratch," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud.

Unfairly penalized

Council member Gerard Rose said he hoped the time extension would help people who are being unfairly penalized by the system.

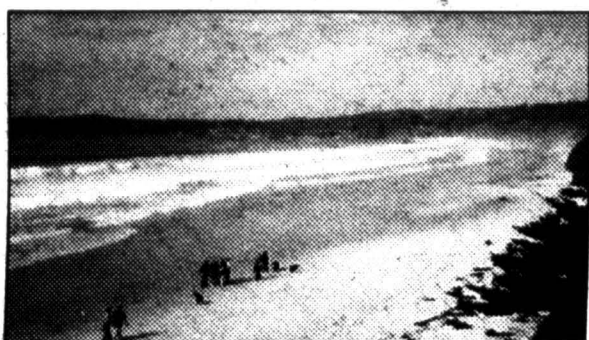

"Two years to get a project approved is way too long," Rose said. "Three years is way too long and waiting more than three years is simply outrageous. We're doing what we can as a city council to make sure that never happens again."

Since the city will be allowing time extensions to last up to a year after the LCP is certified, councilman Dick Ely wondered what would happen if the LCP isn't certified for another 10 years.

Apparently a handful of people would get a very long time extension.

However, the rest of the council and city staff were hopeful that the city's long delay in completing its LCP would soon be a thing of the past.

Every city and county along the California coastline was required by law to complete a Local Coastal Plan to protect and manage the coast by 1981. Carmel-by-the-Sea didn't finish its LCP until last December and is still waiting for the coastal commission to certify the document.

What should water project study ponder? District wants to know

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District wants to know what questions should be asked in an environmental study of plans for solving the Peninsula's water shortage. Two meetings to collect input from the public are set for July 10 and written comments are due July 17.

The EIR — scheduled to be completed by October 2003 — will evaluate aquifer storage and recovery (ASR) in detail, according to MPWMD planner Henrietta Stern. Other ideas such as desalination, reclamation, stormwater reuse and off-stream storage will be scrutinized.

Consultant Jones & Stokes will undertake a detailed study of the ASR system, including locations of pipelines and wells and possible impacts to biological and cultural resources, traffic, noise and air quality.

Information from the EIR on Cal-Am's Carmel River Dam and Reservoir Project will also be included. When the California Public Utilities Commission finally completes its "Plan B" study of dam alternatives, the EIR may be amended to include its components in greater detail.

Stern encouraged people to let the district know what other options should be studied and what additional impacts should be addressed.

"It's not what project you think is better or worse, but what you think the EIR should include," she said.

Written comments can be sent to Stern at the MPWMD, P.O. Box 85, Monterey, CA 93942 until July 17 or citizens can attend meetings scheduled for July 10. The first will be at 2 p.m. in the conference room at the MPWMD offices at 5 Harris Ct., Bldg. G, in Monterey; the second is set for 7 p.m. at Oldemeyer Center, 986 Hilby Ave., Seaside.

The board of directors will discuss those comments at a July 31 session, and is scheduled to take formal action on the EIR's scope at its Aug. 19 meeting. Beginning July 15, all regular board meetings will be held in city council chambers at Seaside City Hall rather than in Monterey.

'It's not what project you think is better or worse, but what you think the EIR should include.'

Carmel Valley: Encina resident reported seeing bright light in her house on Friday.

Carmel Valley: Vista Verde resident reported someone took $90 to $100 from her purse.

THURSDAY, JUNE 27

Carmel area: Mesa Drive resident reported someone threw an orange at his roof.

Carmel area: Pradera Road resident reported the front license plate from her vehicle had been stolen.

Carmel Valley: Anonymous person called and reported a suspicious male sitting in a beige VW truck on Del Fino. Male and truck were gone on arrival.

Big Sur: Report of possible child pornography in the Big Sur area. Informed the alleged victim had moved out of state and the person who reported the incident failed to return numerous phone calls.

Carmel area: Report of unrecognized phone calls made on a Crossroads business phone. Person thinks his business line might have been tapped.

Carmel area: Upper Trail resident reported a suspicious vehicle parked unoccupied with its headlights on on Upper Trail. Check done. Vehicle clear. However, cited for expired registration.

Carmel area: Anonymous neighbor in the vicinity of 17th Avenue and Valley View reported a suspicious vehicle circling the neighborhood for almost two hours. Contacted a 47-year-old male Carmel resident. He was looking for his girlfriend and dog, who were reportedly out for a walk in the area.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported that her 8-year-old child reported seeing a suspicious vehicle in the area of Via La Ventana and Punta Del Monte.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contacted a subject while he slept sitting on the curb at Lincoln and Seventh at 0419 hours. He was advised of the CMC regarding sleeping and camping in public. He advised he had taken a cab from a Pacific Grove laundry and wanted to see the galleries in Carmel as well as the Golden Bough Theater. He was advised most businesses didn't open for another five hours so he decided to go about his business and walk back to Monterey and come back later. He was evaluated for 5150 V&I and he advised the only medication he takes is Dilantin, for seizures. He left the area on foot.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ongoing history of bad feelings and disagreements between subjects. Dispute arose over one suspecting the other might be copying jewelry designs. One subject left the store, slamming the door. The other contacted police. This infuriated the first subject and the two argued on the sidewalk in front of the store. Both counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of attempted credit card fraud at a San Carlos Street jeweler.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Driver of a 1971 Morgan Plus 8 suspected of driving with a suspended license.

Big Sur: Suspect struck the victim in the head with a Maglite flashlight at Pico Blanco Boy Scout Camp.

Pebble Beach: A 13-year-old female victim has been conversing with a yet-unidentified adult through the Internet on a chat line. Adult convinced victim to meet him in person, where she was molested.
